

Editorial

In the recent years I have witnessed the constant growth of some young colleagues who, thanks to a widespread, open, and constant sharing of experience, have actively entered our editorial project and today constitute a key figure and are surely part of the esprit de corps that led us to the publication of the second issue of Annali di Stomatologia.

Joining our working group means sharing its values but, not only!

“The more people who share knowledge, the more the community benefits from it” and it is in this spirit, that we want to give back to our readers this final product of a high-level research that aims to represent a point of reference in the affirmation of knowledge in our sector.

Including many young people in our team of researchers has been a challenge, but it is returning a great satisfaction, indeed. A great number of people, motivated to increase their knowledge without fear of discussion, sometimes even in opposition to the traditional techniques and rules, has given new life to new debates.

And it is from there that we have started, walking together the path of a shared plan and a mutual exchange of ideas and knowledge, aiming to the excellence without ever taking anything for granted. Young editors who question themselves about their knowledge, lead us to a great challenge with ourselves, sometimes breaking down barriers that open us and new possible horizons of research.

As part of our goals, we enhance the quality of information, we favor the cultural growth of the Dental community and we open to the principles of modernity and technical evolution, improving a change in action while also maintaining constant attention on possible translations with respect to the current practices.

Scenarios in a swift and constant evolution are for us a further stimulus to continue with passion and perseverance and while we are about to start a new chapter of our work, I would like to address a thank you to all the professionals who have worked with incessant commitment and have renewed daily their will to guarantee us a spot on the international level.

Happy reading!

Prof. Roberto Gatto